Julie Comer Cahill is an attorney in the firm's Atlanta office where she is a member of the Intellectual Property & Technology Service Group. Her practice focuses on business law and litigation, intellectual property, product liability, construction, professional liability, insurance defense, and estate and probate matters.

Julie represents individual and business clients in litigation, mediation, and arbitration at the state and federal level, both throughout Georgia and nationwide. Her practice covers a wide variety of litigation issues, including shareholder and complex business disputes, employment matters, construction disputes, trademark and copyright infringement, and various breach of contract, tort, and fraud actions. She also advises corporate leaders on corporate governance, compliance, and strategic planning.

Julie also represents governmental entities and officials, individuals, and businesses against a variety of claims, including violation of civil rights, automobile accidents, premises liability, and insurance disputes.

Her experience includes all phases of litigation from inception of a case through resolution. She is also skilled in conducting thorough pre-suit investigations and discovery for matters not yet set for trial.
