Neil Barton focuses his practice on helping insurers and businesses manage risk, resolve disputes, and defend high-exposure claims. He is a trusted advisor to insurance carriers facing complex coverage questions and litigation arising from catastrophic property losses, fires, explosions, and serious injury and wrongful death claims.

Neil routinely provides coverage opinions, litigates declaratory judgment actions, and defends insurers against bad faith allegations. His experience spans a wide range of coverage issues involving homeowners, commercial property, general liability, and excess policies. Clients rely on him to analyze complicated factual investigations, identify coverage defenses, and develop practical litigation strategies that align legal risk with business objectives.

A certified Fire and Explosion Investigator through the National Association of Fire Investigators, Neil brings a rare combination of legal and technical expertise to matters involving fire origin-and-cause investigations, subrogation issues, arson allegations, and large-loss property claims.

Neil also has experience litigating fiduciary disputes and challenges to the settlement and administration of trusts and estates.
